To Whom It May Concern:

Ginger Mayerson began to work with the USC Purchasing Department in 2008 when her lab was awarded $5M in NIH grants. In order to manage these awards, Ginger completed the trainings for the online financial system, and the ethics in federal grant management certificate required by the university. She also kept current on NIH and USC policy, and attended as many grant management courses and seminars at USC as she could in her ongoing effort to be as informed as possible about USC and NIH policies and procedures. In the three years that she worked with my department, she was pleasant and professional, even in challenging situations. There were times when Ginger was caught between the purchasing demands of her lab and the requirements USC and/or NIH purchasing policy. In those cases, she did as much research as she could into the policy, never hesitated to ask my department questions, and efficiently, calmly and tactfully managed the solution.

I am happy to recommend her for any position in which her skills and professionalism might serve. I can provide a verbal reference as well. Please contact Ginger so she can forward your contact information to me.

Sincerely,

Jane Singleton
