To whom it may concern:

I have known Ginger Mayerson as a writer and friend for years. During this period, I have participated in writing and editing projects with her. Ginger is a joy to work with: talented, patient, creative and committed to the work in front of her, while keeping track of other assignments around her. She finishes what she starts. She enjoys work, and helps those around her enjoy theirs.

I have worked in higher education for most of my life, and know the scarcity of people like Ginger in college administration and related science and business projects. I would not hesitate to higher her in any position that required detail orientation, hard work, and keeping track of many things at once, as well as intelligence and inspiration.
